HAIL TO THE CHIEF!

The Right Honourable Sir John A. Macdonald in our Midst.

The First Canadian Premier to Visit British Columbia.

The following short biographical sketch of the life, of Canada's great statesman and Prime Minister, now that he is amongst us, may prove of interest to many of our readers; especially the younger portion who were born and have attained the full stature of manhood and womanhood since the Right Honorable Sir John Alexander Macdonald assumed control of the government of this country:

"Much can be made of a Scotchman, if caught young," is an expression credited to the great, but eccentric, Ben. Johnson. Were it possible for that philosopher to visit Canada to-day he would find on all hands the most positive proof of the correctness of his assertion. In statesmanship and politics, the learned professions, trade and commerce, art and science, mechanism and artizanship, we find the "Scot in Canada" occupying a foremost position. That which is true of to-day was equally so a quarter of a century ago. The names of many eminent Scotchmen will be emblazoned on the escutcheon of fame when future historians will write the history of Canada from the period at which responsible government was granted us.

Beginning with the year 1840, when the union between Upper and Lower Canada was consummated, we find that but few indeed of the prominent public men that were guiding the destinies of the then Canada are to-day left to tell posterity, and others who have since come to possess the land, any of the troubles they had to surmount or the privations they had to endure in their early struggles. Then, as now, auld Scotia furnished her quota of statesmen, legislators, men learned in the law and other professions, divines, financiers, merchants and agriculturists.

About this period there appeared on the political horizon a young man whose star was destined to shine with a splendour as none before it sparkled in this country, and it is very doubtful if a parallel to it will be found in the future. Born in the City of Glasgow, Scotland, on the 11th of January, 1815—a year ever memorable in the history of the British Empire for its great Waterloo victory—of Sutherlandshire parentage.

JOHN ALEXANDER MACDONALD

at the age of five years with the family emigrated to Canada. Of his early age, and school day period, not much is known beyond that at a very tender age he began to develop those wonderful qualities of mesmeric influence that throughout life has so singularly distinguished his career as a statesman, politician, citizen and friend. He was familiarly known to his schoolmates—many of whom afterwards played an important part in the country's history—as "John Alec," in consequence of there being more than one Macdonald in the city and going to school. Kingston has the distinguished honor of turning out such statesmen as the gentlemen who forms the subject of this article, as well as the Hon. Oliver Mowatt, Ontario's premier and great constitutional lawyer, Sir Alex Campbell, Canada's Postmaster General and others eminent as jurists, divines doctors and professors in many callings.

CALLED TO THE BAR.

Having finished his scholastic education Mr. Macdonald became an articled clerk to Mr. George Mackenzie, who at that time had an extensive legal practive. Here the future premier of his adopted country displayed an aptitude for the profession he had chosen that at the Hilary Term of 1836, at the early age of 21 years he was called to the Bar of Upper Canada. Two years after being called to the Bar he became famous in consequence of his able defence of the Pole Von Schoultz, who had taken a prominent part in the uprising in Upper and Lower Canada, under the leadership of William Lyon Mackenzie and Louis Joseph Papineau, in their struggles against family compactism and in favor of responsible government. The defence was an able one, displaying on the part of the barrister of 23 years a forensic knowledge and grasp of the subject matter in hand that at once gave Mr. Macdonald a front rank position, raising him to fame at one bound. He did not succeed, however, in convincing the court trying the case of the innocence of his client, who shortly afterwards suffered for his indiscretions. During the troubles of 1837, he threw himself and all his energies on the side of the Loyalists and from that day to the present he has continued to be an unflinching upholder of Canada maintaining her connection with the Mother country and the vast British Empire.

ENTERS POLITICAL LIFE.

These were trying periods about the forties. The advocates for greater liberty for the subject were struggling against great odds; the family compact although still powerful were fast losing its grasp on the young country—very much to their regret, but greatly to the delight of the progressive reform party.

As a condition in the basis of union the seat of government for Canada was to be located at Kingston, and in 1841 parliament there convened. The meeting of this body in his adopted city created in Mr. Macdonald an appetite for public life. He now came in contact with men of broad enlightened views which to his young mind was as food to a babe. He was avaricious for knowledge and enlightenment on the political topics that then so greatly agitated the country. Sir Charles Metcalf was governor of the united provinces and between that gentleman and the City of Kingston a serious dispute arose in which Mr. Macdonald, who then occupied a position in the city's council took sides against the governor and his ministry, casting his lot with the family compact for the time being. He had previously been known as a "rebel adviser" and the news of his alliance to the "loyal party" created a considerable sensation. It was the pivot point in his political career. The Draper-Viger administration fell in 1844. A general election took place in the fall of that year. Mr. Macdonald was induced to allow himself to be nominated for the City of Kingston. It was then open voting and the contest lasted for two days. From start to finish Mr. Macdonald led his adversary, a Mr. Manahan, by a considerable majority. The Tories throughout the province had been slightly victorious for on the Assembly meeting Sir Allan McNab was elected Speaker by a majority of three. On his first entrance into parliament Mr. Macdonald took an active part in the disputes and proceedings of the House.

AN EXCITING PERIOD.

The Baldwin-Lafontaine administration, on taking office, introduced a measure for the relief of those who had suffered by the 1837 rebellion. It was termed the Rebellion Losses Act. It passed parliament and received the consent of Lord Elgin, who but a short time previous to its passage had been appointed Governor. Lord Elgin so greatly incensed the "loyalty" party that the parliament buildings in Montreal were burned. His Excellency pelted by a mob in Montreal with addled eggs, and when on his way to Upper Canada the "black flag" was hoisted in his face at Brockville. Everyone's loyalty then was tested. To his credit, be it said, Mr. Macdonald at that time was strenuous in his advocacy for moderation and the maintenance of the peace of the land. West of Kingston Lord Elgin's progress was one triumphal march, everywhere he was received with the greatest enthusiasm. In a short time the falling subsided and the country then began its great onward progressive march, in which direction it has ever since maintained its policy.

BECOMES A CABINET MINISTER.

On the 4th of May, 1844, he accepted the portfolio of Receiver General, shortly afterwards to be exchanged for that of Commissioner of Crown Lands, an office which he held in the Morris-Viger administration, which was defeated. The Hincks-Rolph administration, a purely Reform one was then formed. To this government Mr. Macdonald was opposed. He was most active in his denunciations of Mr. Hincks and his colleagues. This government was instrumental in introducing the Municipal Institutions Act for Upper Canada and the Grand Trunk Railway Act, whereby it was agreed that Canada should loan the Company a sum of money not to exceed £4,000,000 sterling—which sum to this day has remained unpaid. Mr. Macdonald and Mr. George Brown at this time were the two most prominent personages in the Assembly outside the Cabinet, the former strong in his opposition and the latter in his support of the government of the day. Mr. Macdonald charged the Honorable afterwards (Sir) Francis Hincks with being so corrupt a politician that his quality came out of every pore in his skin. The Globe likewise became strongly hostile and the government fell. It was succeeded by the Macnab-Movin administration, receiving from Mr. Macdonald a cordial support, on such vital questions as the Clergy reserves and the seignorial tenures, which, however, had to be settled in consequence of the pressure brought upon these by reformers.

THE TORY LEADER FOR UPPER CANADA.

At this time the party, led by Sir Allan Macnab, drew most of its strength from the Tory Oligarchy which had oppressed the country in the days of the Family Compact. It was a colonial reproduction of the English Tory party, with all of its arrogance and few of its commanding virtues. The young member for Kingston, looking into the future, saw that his party would inevitably be swept away before the rising waves of Liberalism. The danger threatened the complete annihilation of the Conservatives. This was thwarted by Mr. Macdonald joining with the late Hon. (afterwards Sir) E. P. Tache in forming the Tache-Macdonald government. This combination was so strong that the McNab element was thrown overboard to be replaced by the Macdonaldites. In the fall of 1854 the Tache-Macdonald government appealed to the country and were sustained at the polls. The Hon. John A. Macdonald occupied the portfolio of Attorney-General for Upper Canada from the 11th Sept., 1854, to the 29th July, 1858. The sessions were held in Toronto, and very stormy ones they were. Another dissolution took place in 1857. A change in the portfolios had taken place in the meantime, the Hon. John A. Macdonald becoming Premier, having for his colleague from Lower Canada, the Hon. George Et. Cartier. The Macdonald-Cartier administration was again sustained. The contest for supremacy between the Conservatives and Reformers had now become very bitter. The latter were led by Mr. George Brown who was a most uncompromising opponent of the government. He had adopted the "Protestant" cry on the hope of being able to make a clean sweep of Upper Canada, and such cries as representation based upon population, and retrenchment in the expenditure of the country. The Conservative majority from Lower Canada under Hon. Mr. Cartier's leadership had increased to such an extent that the Reform majority from Upper Canada was over shadowed.

THE DOUBLE SHUFFLE.

The 1858 session was a long, stormy one. The seat of government question was still agitated. The Queen had decided in favor of Ottawa, then known as By-town. The opposition were led by Mr. Geo. Brown and Mr. A. A. Dorion representing the Reformers of Upper and Lower Canada. An adverse vote was carried in the Assembly, which still meet in Toronto, against the government on the seat of government questions. Sir Francis Head accepted the resignation of his ministers and called to his aid Mr. George Brown to form a cabinet. That gentleman, as was afterwards learned, fell into a trap that his wily adversary had set for him. In a few hours Mr. Brown succeeded in his task. Many of the gentlemen selected by him had hitherto been adverse to the general policy of the opposition. This alarmed the Governor as well as late advisers. Mr. Brown and his colleagues were sworn into office. They vacated their seats pending the approval by their constituents of the step they had taken. Every member, although strongly opposed, was elected. Mr. Brown urged upon the Governor the dissolution of the House—a constitutional right the new government was entitled to. It was held that the country had a right to pronounce on the policy of the Brown-Dorion administration. Sir Francis Head was inexorable in his decision. There can be no question that his action was arbitrary, leaving him open to the charge of being a party to a plot. Impartial writers have invariably condemned the conduct of all who took part in that extraordinary shuffle of the cabinet portfolios. A vote of censure was carried against the government of Mr. Brown, which at once resigned. No sooner had they done so than the Cartier-Macdonald government was formed. This was but a reversion of positions. The incoming cabinet took up the portfolios without appealing to their constituents for approval. At the time it was a great scandal, the like of which it is to be hoped will never be repeated in Canada again. It might have been legal and constitutional, but it was an extraordinary stretch of the Governor's prerogative. Hon. John A. Macdonald resumed his former position of Attorney General for Upper Canada. Political fever now run at a fever heat. The government, however, was too securely entrenched on the treasury benches to be removed. The seat of government was removed to Quebec in 1860. The government as formed in August, 1858, with slight changes continued in office till after the general election of 1861. The voice of the people again pronounced in their favor, but by a greatly reduced majority. Hon. G. Brown had been defeated in Toronto and the opposition was led by the late Hon. J. Sandfield Macdonald. The government was defeated in May, 1862, by a small majority. Then the Macdonald- (John Sandfield) Sicotte government was formed and continued in office until the dissolution of 1863, when Hon. Mr. Sicotte was elevated to the Bench, his place being taken by the Hon. A. A. Dorion. In this cabinet were the Hon. D'Arcy McGee, Hon. M. H. Foley and others, who have long since, along with their leader, joined the great majority. At the polls the government as reconstructed was sustained, but with so slight a majority that the working of the government became an impossibility. The Hon. J. C. Abbott, now solicitor of the C. P. R., was Solicitor-General; the Hon. J. C. Aikens, now Lieut.-Governor of Manitoba, was also in that cabinet. On the 30th of March, 1864, the Macdonald-Dorion government was defeated and the Tache-Macdonald government formed.

The Hon. Dr. Connor who sat for South Oxford died. A contest took place in that constituency between the Hon. Geo. Brown, who was largely endorsed by the Conservatives, and Mr. E. V. Bodwell now of this city, resulting in the election of the former by a large majority. Mr. Brown entered the Assembly in 1863 as an independent member. He however was the recognized leader of the Reform party known as the Brownites, or "Clear Grits."

THE FATHERS OF CONFEDERATION.

The Tache-Macdonald administration found it equally as difficult to proceed with the legislature of the country as did their predecessors. In short legislation had at last reached a dead lock, neither party being able to control a majority of the House. The Hon. Alex. Morris interested himself in bringing about a change. He was the medium between the Hon. John A. Macdonald and Hon. Geo. Brown and the means of bringing about an understanding between these gentlemen, the result of which was the appointment of a special committee to whom was referred the question of a "federal" or a "legislative" union of all the British North America provinces. That committee was composed of seven members; four of whom voted and reported in favor of a federal union, amongst whom were Hon. Messrs Brown, Dorion, Macdougall and another gentleman; against that system, and in favor of the legislative union were Hons. John A. Macdonald, Geo. Et. Cartier and another. The initial step towards confederation was then taken by Hons. Messrs. Macdonald and Brown and their respective followers. Negotiations were opened with the provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland. A preliminary conference was held in Quebec, followed by a general one in Charlottetown, P. E. I., in the summer of 1864. In these negotiations the Hon. John A. Macdonald took a very prominent part. The Nova Scotian contingent was led by the Hon. Dr. Tupper, that of New Brunswick by the Hons. S. L. Tilley and J. H Gray (now Judge Gray of this city.) The repeated gatherings and visits to London culminated in the federation of the four provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. It is not our province to discuss the means by which the scheme was carried in Nova Scotia, which has been styled the "spoiled child" of the Dominion. The 1st of July, 1867, had been fixed as the

BIRTHDAY OF CONFEDERATION.

A coalition government was formed in 1864 by the union of the Brownites and the Conservatives. Hon. George Brown entered the cabinet with the Hon. John A. Macdonald as President of the Council, accompanied by Hons. Oliver Mowat, Wm. Macdougall, W. P. Howland and A. J. Fergusson-Blair. Mr. Brown's position was at all times an uncomfortable one and early in 1866, in consequence of a difference of opinion relative to the question of reciprocity he withdrew. Sir E. P. Tache died and Sir N. F. Belleare selected as his successor in the premiership.

A GENERAL DISSOLUTION.

On July 1, 1867, when the British North America Act came into force, it became necessary to form local governments for each of the four provinces. The machinery was then set in motion to carry out the spirit of the Act. A general election for the federal as well as the local parliaments took place in the autumn of 1867. Messrs. Howland, Macdonald and Blair still adhered to the compact entered on behalf of the Reformers. The Coalition, or "Fair Trial" party, as they claimed themselves to be, were sustained throughout the new Dominion. Local houses were also elected in sympathy with that party. The office of Minister of Justice was filled by the Hon. John A. Macdonald from 1867 to 1873, when he resigned. For some years previous to this he had been premier.

ACQUISITION OF THE HUDSON BAY TERRITORY.

After many years the capitulation of the Hudson Bay territory by the company claiming the right to control it was accomplished in 1869. Both parties were pledged in the acquisition of that great country. Under the first Dominion administration it was accomplished. The purchase money £300,000 sterling and a large land grant was considered by many as too liberal an arrangement. However, it was considered a very valuable addition to the Dominion. Negotiations were still pending with Prince Edward Island and British Columbia.

THE INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY.

By the terms of the Act of Confederation Canada had undertaken to complete, equip and maintain in running order the Intercolonial Railway, and extend that system into New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. Active steps were at once taken to give effect to that agreement. At a great cost, and built in the most round route about manner possible the line was completed.

THE PACIFIC RAILWAY MOOTED

To render Confederation complete and to enable its founders to carry out their full mission the scheme of building a great transcontinental line from the Ontario system westwards began to be mooted. The completion of this great highway was the sine qua non on which British Columbia entered Confederation in July, 1871. The compact was firmly and surely made, and the completion of the line promised in ten years.

THE PACIFIC SCANDAL.

By the effluxion of time the first parliament of the Dominion expired in July, 1872. A general election was held. Feeling against the government now was very strong. Rival companies were pressing the government for control of the railway charter that had been passed during the late session. Evidence submitted to the Commons and the country afterwards revealed the unpleasant fact that several members of the cabinet had been liberally supplied with money by Sir Hugh Allan, wherewith to carry the elections, on the assurance that the sums so advanced would be recouped him. A warm debate took place on this evidence, resulting in the resignation of (now) Sir John A. Macdonald's government. It was supposed by many that this one act alone would be the political death of the gallant knight. Mr. Mackenzie in January 1874, appealed to the country and carried it by a sweeping majority. It was supposed Sir John's star had set forever. The tide had again set in in his favor and on the 17th October, 1878, he was again sworn in as Minister of the Interior and Premier. The country had condemned an indiscreet act on his part, and he returned to power with as great a majority as that which had apparently condemned his policy by giving Mr. Mackenzie such a sweeping majority in 1874.

THE NATIONAL POLICY.

Sir John Macdonald has always been a keen discerner of the times. A period of severe commercial depression prevailed during the whole of Mr. Mackenzie's regime. It was universal. Previous to this it is well known that his views on trade matters leaned towards a low or revenue tariff. Many believing that a high or protective tariff would effect a change in commercial matters agitated in favor of that which is now the national policy. It was the rallying cry of the Conservatives, joined in by many Liberals who were manufacturers, during the contest of 1878. It carried its advocates into power, who, true to their pledges, in the spring of 1879 introduced and carried into effect changes in the tariff greater than any one had hoped for. The vast expenditure on public works that were in progress then and continued since the period named, has had the effect of making business brisk in certain localities; but whether the policy as a whole has been one of advantage to the entire country is a debateable problem.

THE SYNDICATE CONTRACT.

The government set itself energetically to work on resuming power to complete the building of the Canadian Pacific Railway. So far as the policy of their predecessors was concerned in regard to the building of the line from Lake Superior to the Red river, no change was made. Otherwise the changes made were great. After much correspondence and negotiations a contract was closed with a company of capitalists whose names are now well known to our readers for the completion of the undertaking. At first sight it may be considered that the conditions and inducements offered these gentlemen by the government were too liberal. However it is morally certain that had the government undertaken to complete the enterprise as a government work none can assert when it would be completed, nor at what cost. Now the work is finished a considerable time within the limit fixed in the contract and at a cost the exact figure of which is well known to the country. This is justly regarded as an unparalleled achievement in any country and the great and crowing act of the Rt. Hon. Sir John A Macdonald's long eventful and withall successful career. This he accomplished notwithstanding the determined hostility given the scheme in many quarters not only in Canada, but also in the monetary centers of Europe and America. The carrying through parliament of the various measures in connection with the enterprise required rare tact and administrative ability of no ordinary degree. It must, indeed, be gratifying to the premier to look back on his career and after a careful survey of the many great public undertakings he has been instrumental in carrying forward to completion, towering above them all comes the great Queen's highway encircling the Dominion from ocean to ocean, and to put that to his great statesmanship, wonderful genius, indomitable perseverence and unbounded faith in the country is due the perpetual monument down to posterity as an example of what can be accomplished by one man in his life time.

SIR JOHN'S DREAM

has been more than realized. He has traveled on the line from St. Lawrence to Burrard Inlet, a distance of 3,000 miles, and all within British possessions, over which he has been the virtual ruler for so many years. To the lot of none before him has it fallen to achieve such wonderful accomplishments, and certain it is that to none who may follow him will a similar favor be extended. It is the first transcontinental line spanning the continent built by any statesman, and therefore, while it may not be the last, it stands to-day without a parallel.

He has earned the perpetual gratitude of British Columbian's especially, who to-day honor him as no other personage ever will be on coming into our midst. He richly deserves all the enthusiasm and affectionate good will now being bestowed upon him, and the wish is that he long be spared to enjoy the well earned laurels his Queen, his adopted country and the entire British Empire are bestowing upon him.

HIS PRIVATE AND PUBLIC LIFE.

Sir John has been twice married. His first wife died in 1856. She was a daughter of Alex. Clark, Esq., of Dalnavert, Inverness-shire, Scotland. His son Hugh John Macdonald is a barrister in Winnipeg, a daughter, who is not in good health, accompanied her parents to Banff Springs, where she is undergoing treatment. His present wife—Lady Macdonald—he married in 1867. She is a daughter of the late Hon. T. J. Bernard, of H. P. C., of the Island of Jamaica. To Sir John Lady Macdonald has been a noble, exemplary wife. In weal and affliction she has been his constant companion, and to her great care and attention is largely due the comparative, excellent health Sir John of late years has enjoyed.

In addition to his parliamentary and executive duties Sir John has filled important positions in International commissions for the Queen, notable amongst the many being Alabama claims and the commission which framed the Washington treaty.

He was first knighted in 1867. In 1865 he had conferred on him the degree of D. C. L. from the Oxford University. Is also an LL. D., and a D. C. L. In 1884 he had the additional title of G. C. B. conferred on him. In 1872, he was created a K. G. C.; and is a member of H. M. Privy Council, besides enjoying many other distinguished honors.

Sir John holds an exalted rank in Free Masonry. Is the grand representative Canada of the Grand Lodge of England, as well as holding the office of Past Grand Warden of the Grand Lodge of Canada.

He attends the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Ottawa. His visits to other churches are frequent.

His residence, Earnscliffe, overlooking the Ottawa river, and in full view of the noble pile of buildings, famed for their architectural beauty, which are amongst the many land marks he will leave behind as having been instrumental in rearing heavenwards at the capital, is one of the most charming spots in the country. The Premier's residence, so gracefully presided over by Lady Macdonald is a spot to which many resort during the sessions of parliament, and by those who may be sojourning at the capital. The host and hostess of Earnscliffe are very popular with all classes at Ottawa.

At present Sir John represents the county of Carleton, Ont. He sat for Kingston from 1844 to 1878. Was then defeated, but elected for Marquette, Manitoba; resigned that constituency in October, 1878, and was then elected for this city, which seat he held until the general election of 1882.

It would require a large volume to enumerate Sir John's many public acts. That duty will be a pleasant one for his biographer and the historian.

Long life and prosperity then to the Rt. Hon. Sir John Alexander Macdonald and his noble consort Lady Macdonald is the wish of every true British Columbian amongst whom these distinguished personages are now sojourning.

CRAWFORD-DILKE SCANDAL.

LONDON, July 23.—The case of Crawford against Crawford and Dilke was given to the jury this afternoon. They returned a verdict finding Mrs. Crawford guilty of adultery with Sir Charles Dilke and granted Mr. Crawford a divorce. The jury was absent twenty minutes. The only decision arrived at by the jury is, that Mr. Crawford is entitled to a divorce from his wife on the ground of adultery with Dilke, as decided nisi by Justice Sir Charles Butt on February 12th last. The present case being simply a rehearing on the intervention of the Queen's proctor, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the decree nisi should not be set aside on the ground of collusion between Mr. and Mrs. Crawford, or on new evidence invalidating his wife's confession; the jury finding in favor of Crawford the proceeding confirms the previous decree, and makes it absolute at the expiration of the six months attaching to it. This six months will expire in August, the decree nisi having been issued on February 12th. The Queen's proctor has been condemned to pay the costs of the present proceedings.

The Montreal Gazette states that the Quebec elections are not likely to occur before the end of September.

Hon. Peter Mitchell is visiting his constituents in Northumberland, and announces himself as an independent candidate for re-election.

Earl Granville's worst enemy is the gout. He is confined to his bed. This is the explanation of his resignation of the Liberal leadership in the House of Lords.

New Zealand—or a portion of it—has been suffering from a combination of earthquakes and volcanoes, picturesquely diversified by waves of flame. Take it long by broad and Canada is about as happy as they make 'em.

It is suggestive to hear Mr. Labouchere urging his party to abolish the tax upon the poor man's tea and coffee, and to levy the deficiency upon the rich man's income. The tax upon tea and coffee is one of the free trade anomalies that were disposed of in Canada by the much-abused N. P.

Mr. C. O. Ermatinger, the present M. P. P. for the riding, will be the Ministerial candidate for the Commons in East Elgin at next election. Dr. Marlatt will be the nominee for the Legislature.

It is stated on reliable authority that Ald. John McMillan will run in Toronto for the Local Legislature at the coming elections as an independent temperance candidate.

Our readers will be glad to learn that the report of the Hon. Mr. Mowat's serious illness is not well-founded. The Ontario premier had been sick, but not dangerously so.

At the North Wentworth Reform Convention Mr. James McQueen, of Beverly, one of the oldest Reformers of North Wentworth, who has voted 53 years in Beverly, nominated Mr. Bain for the Commons in a spirited speech. Mr. H. Moore, of Dundas, another veteran, said that he had an ambition to second the nomination, having been 50 years a worker in the Reform cause in North Wentworth.

SIR JOHN A. MACDONALD

To Arrive To-Night—A Warm Reception Awaiting Him.

The Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, it is definitely stated, will arrive to-night on the Princess Louise from Port Moody. The steamer will probably reach her wharf between 9 and 10 o'clock. The distinguished statesman will be met at the wharf by His Worship the Mayor, who will extend to him and Lady Macdonald an informal welcome to the city. The brass band and a procession will escort the party to the Driard House. An address will be presented to Sir John in the Victoria Theatre by the Corporation of the city, on a day yet to be named and agreeable to the wishes of our guests. A regatta on the Arm, a banquet at the Driard House, and possibly a ball, will form special features of the festivities to celebrate the first visit of a Canadian premier to Victoria. Whatever form the demonstrations may take—and if time will permit there is no doubt they will be on a scale befitting the occasion—Sir John and Lady Macdonald, we feel assured, will have cause to remember the unbounded hospitality of our citizens.

LEFT VANCOUVER.

A telegram from Vancouver says that the Princess Louise with Sir John A. Macdonald on board, left Port Moody at 2:55 and Vancouver at 3:25. Will arrive here about 10 o'clock.

WILL NOT COALESCE.

LONDON, July 24.—Lord Salisbury called upon Hartington this morning and held an hour's conference with him. Hartington promised Salisbury his friendly support, but declined to join a Conservative government. Churchill subsequently held a conference with Salisbury at 11:30 this morning and started for Osborne to receive the Queen's command to form a government.

BASE BALL ITEMS.

The Shoshone Base Ball Club will play the Seattle Reds August 3d and 4th, and then come over and give the Amities a rub at Beacon Hill.

The Seattle Reds boastingly state that the Amities are afraid to go to Seattle and play; the secretary of the Amities states they are unable to go. Nothing will satisfy the Reds but an inglorious defeat and they will get it soon.

The Portland's have been declared champions of Oregon; how easy they were beaten at Beacon Hill by the Amities. A title without a great deal of credit, evidently.

The Reds defeated the Newcastles at Seattle yesterday by a score of 17 to 3. Eight innings the Newcastles were duck-egged.

FOR ALASKA.

A large number of eastern excursionists are at present in the city en route to Alaska. They will await the arrival of the Idaho. The surpassing beauty of the Alaska voyage is rapidly becoming known in the eastern states, and every succeeding summer will increase the number of pleasure-seekers to our city, the most desirable place of embarkation.

FOR SAN FRANCISCO.

The Mexico which sailed to-day took the following passengers from Victoria: H A Seed, G A Barlow and wife, John Richards, J S Douglas, J P Wanor, Mrs Cooley and child, Mrs E Anbury, N L Oakley, O C Colt, Cecil and Nellie Nash, Atwell King, and twenty-five in the steerage.

MARINE.

The ship New York has discharged nearly the whole of her cargo of steel rails at Port Moody. It is said, however, that she cannot complete unloading until a sufficient quantity of ballast has been put in to prevent her capsizing.

—Next Friday is the time fixed for the execution of Mallot, now lying in goal. The Chinaman Ah Suey will be executed at the same time.

—Rev. Mr. H. C. Hobart, East Portland, arrived from Seattle this morning. He will preach in the Baptist church to-morrow forenoon and evening.

The sporting season is fast approaching when Messrs. Curtis's & Harvey's world-renowned SPORTING POWDER will be in large demand. Dealers should secure their supplies in good time from MESSRS. ROBERT WARD & CO., the wholesale agents for B. C.

—Yosemite's freight: T B Hall, two horses, four dogs, twenty-five packages hardware goods; H Abbott, nine packages personal effects; A B Gray, two bales furs; T. Earle, two bales furs; H Bornstein, two bales wool and nine hides.

Passengers by the Yosemite: Mr and Mrs Hendry, Misses Austin, Mr and Mrs Audeton, Mr and Mrs Jenns, Mrs Lina, E A Wadhams, T F Sinclair, T B Hall, Jones, Boyer, Yates, J J Austin, Brown, Phillip and Smart.

Entries may be made in the following classes till August 3rd: Mineralogy, Botany, Printing, Lithography, Bookbinding, Hair work, Needle work, Shell work, Embroidery, Ceramic art, Plants, Flowers, Bouquets, Ferns, Fruits, Vegetables and Grain in straw. Entries for the canary division will close at noon on the 5th. Entries for the babies' show will close on the 5th. For further information see secretary or posters.

Lt. Col. Kirkpatrick, Speaker of the House of Commons, and Hon. G. W. Ross, Toronto, have been appointed honorary commissioners to the Colonial and Indian Exposition.

Manitoba is not going to run behind in the matter of exhibitions this year. From September 28th to October 1st the Board of Agriculture of the province will hold its eleventh annual fair at St. Boniface. Money prizes amounting to $10,000, besides medals and diplomas, will be awarded.

THOUGH Lord Hartington is worthy of all respect, advanced Liberals might witness with little regret his final departure from the party. He and his Whig friends have long been a drag on the Radicals, who could get much more aggressively if freed from the necessity of accommodating themselves to the Whigs. The rupture might give the Tories power for a while, but in future elections the Liberals would be more solidly united than ever, and when they did come in would be able to carry Radical measures. The Radicals have long wished to get rid of the Whigs, and Chamberlain may now effect the separation advantageously.

LYING CORRESPONDENTS.

Our esteemed morning contemporary calls attention to a dispatch sent from Ottawa on the 22nd July, which contained the followin suggestive insinuations:

"The eyes of Canada are being gradually opened to the political corruption of the legislature and members of Sir John Macdonald's cabinet. * * * Mr. Chagron, a civil service employee, * * * says he is opposed to young girls being employed in the government buildings. He denounced the system used in engaging them, which does not rate their intellectual capacities but their beauty."

The dispatch was no doubt concocted by some newsmonger in search of a sensation, and probably has as much connection with party politics as a Colonist editorial has with facts. There is perhaps as much immorality, of the kind hinted at, in Ottawa as in any other capital in an English-speaking state, but we do not believe there is any more. On the very face of it, however, the dispatch is a fabrication, because no civil service employee would dare to traduce the characters of the lady employees and the members of the government if he valued his official position—as they all do. The associated press, as our contemporary says, must teach some of its agents a lesson if its dispatches are to be deemed reliable—and with it we call upon the purveyor of news to hold a scrutiny as to the authors of all scandalous and libellous dispatches that they may be dealt with as they deserve. The agent in Victoria, who is also the editor of the Colonist, has sent from this city to the Western Associated Press, from time to time, items of a far more scandalous and offensive nature than the above, and in any investigation that is to held the credibility of this correspondent must be enquired into, with a view of his removal. A lying telegraphic correspondent does more harm, because he speaks to a larger constituency, than the same individual in the editorial chair. In the language of the agent for this city: "Let the press association in future ignore all such 'cooked' dispatches and insert on the removal of those persons who take advantage of their positions to serve party (or personal, or spiteful,) ends."

HAVE PRICES TOUCHED BOTTOM?

There are signs that the fall in the prices of staple commodities, which has been going on for the past thirteen years, is about coming to an end. Taking the London market as a criterion, the Economist prints figures to show that the average prices, or index number, of 22 leading articles, which on Jan. 1 was 2,023, and on April 1 was 2,017, has risen on July 1 to 2,026. This is still a little below the level of July 1, 1885, but that the movement should seem to be at all upward is encouraging. The articles which have chiefly been affected by the rise are wool, cotton, silk, tin, lead, and breadstuffs. The main depressing elements are iron and steel which owing to the break-up of the British manufacturers' syndicate, have fallen considerably in the London market. Sugar, also, is slightly lower than it was six months ago, and so is petroleum, while tallow, after experiencing a decline, stands exactly where it did on Jan. 1. Of course no great hopes can be built upon so slender a basis, but it is something of a basis nevertheless. If prices should merely remain at their present figures for six months longer, it would be a great gain. If, in addition, there should be a slight futher rise it would go far toward restoring confidence and stimulating enterprise. It needs, in fact, only to be established that no further depression is probable for all classes of manufacturers and traders to take heart, and at once begin to enlarge their operations.

In writing a letter to her publisher, preparatory to assuming her editorial duties, Miss Rose E. Cleveland says: "I am taking some care to be absolutely certain of what I write in this first confidence with the people. I mean to rather address myself, in this first number, to my country-women, and to my literary country-women, and make my talk very simple and earnest and sincere. I shall ignore the great critics altogether."

A COMING LIBERAL PRIME MINISTER.

The important announcement has been made that Lord GRANVILLE has retired from the Liberal leadership in the House of Lords, and that he has been succeeded by Lord ROSEBERRY. It is understood that ill-health only is the cause of Lord GRANVILLE'S resignation. He is one of the fathers of Parliament, having been in public life for over half a century, having first been returned to Parliament for the borough of Morpeth, while his father, the first Earl, author and statesman, was British Ambassador at Paris. He was not long in Parliament when he was asked to enter the government, and for over forty years he has held a portfolio in every Liberal Government which has been formed. In 1809 he ably sustained the Liberal view in favor of the disestablishment of the Irish Church. It was as head of the Foreign Office, however, that the outside world knew more about Earl GRANVILLE. Through him many of the most difficult questions in foreign policy were settled, not always to Great Britain's advantage, for in dealing with foreign diplomats the noble Earl at times proved more conciliatory than shrewd. As Liberal leader of the House of Lords, however, GRANVILLE has always been a favorite. Even his opponents have testified to his ability and admirable good nature, qualities so requisite to the success of a party chief.

Lord ROSEBERY is looked upon as a coming Prime Minister. Though not yet forty years of age he has taken a front in the political and social world. He made his first political speech in 1871 and his public utterances since then have been regarded as those of a man of deep study and original thought beyond his years and experience. He has traveled much and gained largely in experience in this respect. In Scotland he has filled many important positions of trust and responsibility as president of many boards and rector of the universities of Aberdeen and Edinburgh. To ROSEBERY'S enthusiastic endeavors the success of Mr. GLADSTONE in the ever-memorable campaign in Midlothian in 1880 was due. The influence and prestige of the ducal House of Buccleuch collapsed when its stronghold was attacked by the grand old man and his popular lieutenant. Lord ROSEBERY, who is happily married to a daughter of the millionaire BARON DE ROTHSCHILD, entered the GLADSTONE Government in 1883 as under secretary for the home department. In the late government he had advanced to the very important post (formerly held by Earl GRANVILLE) of Secretary for Foreign Affairs. He is popular not only among the classes, but among the masses. A man of fortune, he has yet striven to make himself acquainted with the needs of the people, and he has advanced with the times. He advocates reform of abuses wherever found. He would even make a radical reform in the House of Lords, and has so expressed himself. Undaunted by the desertion of some of those who have hitherto stood shoulder to shoulder with him in the support of Mr. GLADSTONE, Lord ROSEBERY stood in the forefront of the battle for doing justice to Ireland in the late electoral campaign, and no doubt his speeches in favor of GLADSTONE'S policy of conciliation have had not a little to do in convincing his hard-headed fellow Scotchmen that the concession of self-government to the Irish would rather strengthen than weaken the Empire. It is Lord ROSEBERY'S misfortune that he was born with the title to sit in the House of Lords, though he has adorned that position, and the noble Lord has confessed as much. Leaders do best service, and are more apt to keep pace with the popular needs, when they are chosen from among the responsible representatives of the people. However, it is greatly in Lord ROSEBERY'S favor that hitherto he has kept in the van of the Liberal party, and there is no reason to fear that when he succeeds to the leadership of the Liberal party in the country, as he now dons the leader's mantle in the House of Lords, his principles will be one whit less progressive than they are at the present time.

MR. WEST has said that the English Ministry is disposed to do nothing upon the fishery question until the United States is in a more compliant mood to accept propositions for a new reciprocity treaty. The somewhat petulant expressions which Bayard has weakly allowed himself to use, showing his chagrin at not obtaining a fishery commission, have encouraged Mr. West in his idea that our government will yet comply with his demand for one.

THOSE who argue in favor of commercial union with the United States, observes the Ottawa Free Press, because of the large commercial relations existing between Canada and the neighboring republic are commended to the consideration of these facts: In 1885 Canada's exports to Great Britain were $41,877,705 and her imports from the same country $41,408,777. During the same year, however, Canada's exports to the United States were only $39,752,734, but her imports from that country totalled $47,451,201. In other words though Canada exported more to Great Britain than to the United States and imported from the United States nearly eight millions more than she sold to that country, yet she imported from Great Britain nearly as much as she exported. Why is it in the light of these facts we hear so much about the importance of commercial union with the United States and ignore altogether the trade of that country—Great Britain, which, after all, is our present principal and most profitable customer? Perhaps some advocate of commercial union will explain?

SIR,—We the undersigned having witnessed the terrible fire which wiped out of existence the young city of Vancouver, on the 13th inst. have, after the fire, examined the safes sold by you, some of which were put to the most severe test, having been surrounded by large quantities of lard and bacon, and we are pleased to testify to the remarkable manner in which every Safe sold by you preserved its contents, not only books and papers, but also thousand, of dollars in paper money were taken out in perfect condition. We can, therefore, with the greatest confidence, recommend them as thoroughly fire proof.

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

An Episode in the Life of a Young Girl.

CHAPTER XI.

The trim little maid servant ran up stairs from her modest little kitchen, trembling at the terrible prospect of having to open the door. Miss Pink, deafened by the barking, had just time to say, "What a very ill-behaved dog!" when a sound of small objects overthrown in the hall, and a scurrying of furious claws across the oil cloth, announced that Tommie had invaded the house. As the servant appeared, introducing Lady Lydiard, the dog ran in. He made one frantic leap at Isabel, which would certainly have knocked her down but for the chair that happened to be standing behind her. Received on her lap, the faithful creature half smothered her with his caresses. He barked, he shrieked, in his joy at seeing her again. He jumped off her lap and tore round and round the room at the top of his speed, and every time he passed Miss Pink he showed the whole range of his teeth, and snarled ferociously at her ankles. Having at last exhausted his superfluous energy, he leaped back again on Isabel's lap, with his tongue quivering in his open mouth, his tail wagging softly, and his eye on Miss Pink, inquiring how she liked a dog in her drawing room.

"I hope my dog has not disturbed you, ma'am?" said Lady Lydiard, advancing from the mat at the doorway, on which she had patiently waited until the raptures of Tommie subsided into repose.

Miss Pink, trembling with terror and indignation, acknowledged Lady Lydiard's polite inquiry by a ceremonious bow, and an answer which administered by implication a dignified reproof. "Your ladyship's dog does not appear to be a very well trained animal," the ex-schoolmistress remarked.

"Well trained?" Lady Lydiard repeated, as if the expression were perfectly unintelligible to her; "I don't think you have had much experience of dogs, ma'am." She turned to Isabel, and embraced her tenderly. "Give me a kiss, my dear. You don't know how wretched I have been since you left me." She looked back again at Miss Pink. "You are not, perhaps, aware, ma'am, that my dog is devotedly attached to your niece. A dog's love has been considered by many great men (whose names at the moment escape me) as the most touching and disinterested of all earthly affections." She looked the other way, and discovered the lawyer. "How do you do, Mr. Troy? It's a pleasant surprise to find you here. The house was so dull without Isabel that I really couldn't put off seeing her any longer. When you are more used to Tommie, Miss Pink, you will understand and admire him. You understand and admire him, Isabel, don't you? My child, you are not looking well. I shall take you back with me when the horses have had their rest. We shall never be happy away from each other."

Having expressed her sentiments, distributed her greetings, and defended her dog—all, as it were, in one breath—Lady Lydiard sat down by Isabel's side, and opened a large green fan that hung at her girdle. "You have no idea, Miss Pink, how fat people suffer in hot weather," said the old lady, using her fan vigorously.

Miss Pink's eyes dropped modestly to the ground—"fat" was such a coarse word to use, if a lady must speak of her superfluous flesh!

"May I offer some refreshment?" Miss Pink asked, mincingly. "A cup of tea?"

Lady Lydiard shook her head.

"A glass of water?"

Lady Lydiard declined this last hospitable proposal with an exclamation of disgust. "Have you got any beer?" she inquired.

"I beg your ladyship's pardon," said Miss Pink, doubting the evidence of her own ears. "Did you say—beer?"

Lady Lydiard gesticulated vehmently with her fan. "Yes, to be sure! Beer! beer!"

Miss Pink rose, with a countenance expressive of genteel disgust, and rang the bell. "I think you have beer downstairs, Susan?" she said, when the maid appeared at the door.

"Yes, miss."

"A glass of beer for Lady Lydiard," said Miss Pink, under protest.

"Bring it in a jug," shouted her ladyship, as the maid left the room. "I like to froth it up for myself," she continued, addressing Miss Pink. "Isabel sometimes does it for me, when she is at home; don't you, my dear?"

Miss Pink had been waiting her opportunity to assert her own claim to the possession of her own niece from the time when Lady Lydiard had coolly declared her intention of taking Isabel back with her. The opportunity now presented itself.

"Your ladyship will pardon me," she said, "if I remark that my niece's home is under my humble roof. I am properly sensible, I hope, of your kindness to Isabel; but while she remains the object of a disgraceful suspicion, she remains with me."

Lady Lydiard closed her fan with an angry snap.

"You are completely mistaken, Miss Pink. You may not mean it, but you speak most unjustly if you say that your niece is an object of suspicion to me or to anybody in my house."

Mr. Troy, quietly listening up to this point, now interposed to stop the discussion before it could degenerate into a quarrel. His keen observation, aided by his accurate knowledge of his client's character, had plainly revealed to him what was passing in Lady Lydiard's mind. She had entered the house, feeling (perhaps unconsciously) a jealousy of Miss Pink as her predecessor in Isabel's affections, and as the natural protectress of the girl under existing circumstances. Miss Pink's reception of her dog had additionally irritated the old lady. She had taken a malicious pleasure in shocking the school mistress' sense of propriety, and she was now only too ready to proceed to further extremities on the delicate question of Isabel's justification for leaving her house. For Isabel's own sake, therefore—to say nothing of other reasons—it was urgently desirable to keep the peace between the two ladies. With this excellent object in view, Mr. Troy seized his opportunity of striking into the conversation for the first time.

"Pardon me, Lady Lydiard," he said, "you are speaking of a subject which has been already sufficiently discussed between Miss Pink and myself. I think we shall do better not to dwell uselessly on past events, but to direct our attention to the future. We are all equally satisfied of the complete rectitude of Miss Isabel's conduct, and we are all equally interested in the vindication of her good name."

Whether these temperate words would of themselves have exercised the pacifying influence at which Mr. Troy aimed may be doubtful. But, as he ceased speaking, a powerful auxiliary appeared in the shape of the beer. Lady Lydiard seized on the jug, and filled the tumbler for herself with an unsteady hand. Miss Pink, trembling for the integrity of her carpet, and scandalized at seeing a peeress drinking beer like a washerwoman, forgot the sharp answer that was just rising to her lips when the lawyer interfered. "Small!" said Lady Lydiard, setting down the empty tumbler, and referring to the quality of the beer. "But very pleasant and refreshing. What's the servant's name? Susan? Well, Susan, I was dying of thirst, and you have saved my life. You can leave the jug; I dare say I shall empty it before I go."

Mr. Troy, watching Miss Pink's face, saw that it was time to change the subject again.

"Did you notice the old village, Lady Lydiard, on your way here?" he asked. "The artists consider it one of the most picturesque places in England."

"I noticed that it was a very dirty village," Lady Lydiard answered, still bent on making herself disagreeable to Miss Pink. "The artists may say what they please; I see nothing to admire in rotten cottages and bad drainage and ignorant people. I suppose the neighborhood has its advantages. It looks dull enough, to my mind."

Isabel had hitherto modestly restricted her exertions to keeping Tommie quiet on her lap. Like Mr. Troy, she occasionally looked at her aunt, and she now made a timid attempt to defend the neighborhood, as a duty she owed to Miss Pink.

"Oh, my lady! don't say it's a dull neighborhood," she pleaded. "There are such pretty walks all round us. And when you get to the hills the view is beautiful."

Lady Lydiard's answer to this was a little masterpiece of good-humored contempt. She patted Isabel's cheek, and said, "Pooh pooh!"

"Your ladyship does not admire the beauties of nature," Miss Pink remarked, with compassionate smile. "As we get older I doubt our sight begins to fail——"

"And we leave off canting about the beauties of nature," added Lady Lydiard. "I hate the country. Give me London, and the pleasures of society."

"Come! come! Do the country justice, Lady Lydiard!" put in peace-making Mr. Troy. "There's plenty of society to be found out of London—as good society as the world can show."

"The sort of society," added Miss Pink, "which is to be found, for example, in this neighborhood. Her ladyship is evidently not aware that persons of distinction surround us whichever way we turn. I may instance, among others, the Hon. Mr. Hardyman——"

Lady Lydiard, in the act of pouring out a second glassful of beer, suddenly set down the jug.

"Who is that you're talking of, Miss Pink?"

"I am talking of our neighbor, Lady Lydiard, the Hon. Mr. Hardyman."

"Do you mean Alfred Hardyman, the man who breeds the horses?"

"The distinguished gentleman who owns the famous stud farm," said Miss Pink, correcting the bluntly direct form in which Lady Lydiard had put her question.

"Is he in the habit of visiting here?" the old lady inquired, with a sudden appearance of anxiety. "Do you know him?"

"I had the honor of being introduced to Mr. Hardyman at our last flower show," Miss Pink replied. "He has not yet favored me with a visit."

Lady Lydiard's anxiety appeared to be to some extent relieved.

"I knew that Hardyman's farm was in this county," she said, "but I had no notion that it was in the neighborhood of South Morden. How far away is he—ten or a dozen miles, eh?"

"Not more than three miles," answered Miss Pink. "We consider him quite a near neighbor of ours."

Renewed anxiety showed itself in Lady Lydiard. She looked round sharply at Isabel. The girl's head was bent so low over the rough head of the dog that her face was almost entirely concealed from view. So far as appearances went, she seemed to be entirely absorbed in fondling Tommie. Lady Lydiard roused her with a tap of the green fan.

"Take Tommie out, Isabel, for a run in the garden," she said. "He won't sit still much longer, and he may annoy Miss Pink. Mr. Troy, will you kindly help Isabel to keep my ill-trained dog in order?"

Mr. Troy got on his feet, and, not very willingly, followed Isabel out of the room. "They will quarrel now, to a dead certainty," he thought to himself, as he closed the door. "Have you any idea of what this means?" he said to his companion, as he joined her in the hall. "What has Mr. Hardyman done to excite all this interest in him?"

Isabel's guilty color rose. She knew perfectly well that Hardyman's unconcealed admiration of her was the guiding motive of Lady Lydiard's inquiries. If she had told the truth, Mr. Troy would have unquestionably returned to the drawing room, with or without an acceptable excuse for intruding himself. But Isabel was a woman; and her answer, it is needless to say, was, "I don't know, I'm sure."

In the meantime the interview between the two ladies began in a manner which would have astonished Mr. Troy—they were both silent. For once in her life, Lady Lydiard was considering what she should say, before she said it. Miss Pink, on her side, naturally waited to hear what object her ladyship had in view—waited until her small reserves of patience gave way. Urged by irresistible curiosity, she spoke first.

"Have you anything to say to me in private?" she asked.

Lady Lydiard had not got to the end of her reflections. She said "Yes," and she said no more.

"Is it anything relating to my niece?" persisted Miss Pink.

Still immersed in her reflections, Lady Lydiard suddenly rose to the surface, and spoke her mind, as usual.

"About your niece, ma'am. The other day Mr. Hardyman called at my house and saw Isabel."

"Yes," said Miss Pink, politely attentive, but not in the least interested so far.

"That's not all, ma'am. Mr. Hardyman admires Isabel; he owned it to me himself in so many words."

Miss Pink listened, with a courteous inclination of her head. She looked mildly gratified, nothing more. Lady Lydiard proceeded.

"You and I think differently on many matters," she said, "but we are both agreed, I am sure, in feeling the sincerest interest in Isabel's welfare. I beg to suggest to you, Miss Pink, that Mr. Hardyman, as a near neighbor of yours, is a very undesirable neighbor while Isabel remains in your house."

Saying those words, under a strong conviction of the serious importance of the subject, Lady Lydiard insensibly recovered the manner and assumed the language which befitted a lady of her rank. Miss Pink, noticing the change, set it down to an expression of pride on the part of her visitor, which, in referring to Isabel, assailed indirectly the social position of Isabel's aunt.

"I fail entirely to understand what your ladyship means," she said, coldly.

Lady Lydiard, on her side, looked in undisguised astonishment at Miss Pink.

"Haven't I told you already that Mr. Hardyman admires your niece?" she asked.

"Naturally," said Miss Pink. "Isabel inherits her lamented mother's personal advantages. If Mr. Hardyman admires her, Mr. Hardyman shows his good taste."

Man Pre-Eminently a Cooking Animal.

We are told that among the many epithets that have been bestowed upon man to distinguish him from all other animals, he has been pre-eminently a cooking animal—the only animal who cooks or prepares his food prior to using it (Lindsay). There are many savage races of men who use flesh and fruits in their raw state, sometimes even in a condition of disgusting putridity. Not only so, but they devour living animals, or flesh cut from living animals. Moreover, they tear flesh with their teeth, after the manner of carnivora (Lindsay). Until the arrival of the European the Australians knew nothing about cooking or boiling food (Buchner). The bushmen of South Africa live partly upon small birds, which they swallow unplucked. Lizards are eaten raw by the Digger Indians. The Veddas of Ceylon live on wild honey, lizards and the flesh of monkeys, deers and boars. Wild men and wolf children of India tear and eat raw flesh, gather and gnaw bones like dogs, catch and swallow flies, bite the heads off live fowls, lap water with their tongues. Gerhardt says that they will pick up bones and sharpen their teeth on them. According to Col. Sleeman, a wolf child found in company with a wolf delighted in raw flesh and bones, putting them on the ground under her paws like a dog.—Sarah E. Titcomb.

"She has the sweetest voice in England," people say of Mrs. Oscar Wilde.

DR. VANMONCISCAR has made the treatment of Private Diseases of Men a special study and practice for many years. Over 4000 cases treated yearly. Recent cases of private diseases cured in a short time. Ulcers, Humors and Blotches on Face or Body cured without giving Mercury or other Poisons. Mercury is the curse of the human race. Your children will suffer from its effects. Avoid it as you would avoid any deadly Drug, and use no more. These diseases are being cured at this Dispensary without Mercury.

is a graduate of a regular Medical College, is well known over the United States and Canada by and it is a well known fact that for years he has confined himself to the study and treatment of Sexual and Chronic Diseases, thus giving him advantages few possess. Dr. Vanmonciscar addresses himself particularly to those who have already tried various physicians and remedies from whom they have received no benefits, and who, in fact, have done them more harm than good. Medicine, like all other sciences, is progressive, and every year shows proof of its advances. By a combination of remedies of great curative power, Dr. Vanmonciscar has so arranged his treatment that it will afford not only immediate relief, but permanent cures.

YOUNG MEN

who are suffering from the effects of youthful indiscretions showing some of the following symptoms: Nervious and Physical Debility, Impotency (incapacity) Lost Manhood, Abuses of the system, Exhausted Vitality, Confusion of Ideas, Dull and Loss of Brilliancy to the Eye, Aversion to Society, Despondency, Pimples on the Face, Loss of Energy, and Frequency of Urinating. You may be in the first stages, but remember you are fast approaching the last. Do not let false pride and sham modesty deter you from attending to your ailments. Many a bright and naturally gifted young man, endowed with genius, has permitted his case to run on and on, until remorse racked his intellect, and finally death claimed its victim. Remember that "Procrastination is the thief of time." So lay aside your pride, and consult one who thoroughly understands your ailment, and who will know your case, and find permanent relief for an ailment that has made day a drudgery and night hideous. Thousands upon thousands of men in good standing in the social world, of prominence in the world are to-day suffering from the fruits of their doings, the seeds of which were sown during moments of thoughtlessness. Young man turn and gaze upon thy companion, or seek the mirrior for proof to substantiate this fact. Oh! could he control the arm of Fate, or had he his life to live again, then I could not appeal to you more sincerely. Let your mind wander back to the much cherished counsels of a loving father, and remember what you are to-day. Though you may for the present fill your station in society, the time is as inevitable as fate when your brilliancy will, like a flash, depart, leaving you a stranded wreck—desolate, forgotten and lost; so embrace the opportunity and enjoy life and happiness longer. If you claim to be a man, act your part manly. Do not console yourself with the thought that Nature will help itself, for in doing so you not only kill the Nature, but wreck Nature and yourself. Remember, "Large oaks from little acorns grow;" "Little ills germinate fatal diseases."

Middle-aged Men,

Remember, this is the second stage of Seminal Weakness. In all such cases a perfect cure is guaranteed, and a radical restoration of the Genito-Urinary Organs. So popular are the manufactures of Messrs. Curtis's & Harvey's that unscrupulous persons have imitated their gunpowder canisters and labels used by the firm for upwards of 50 years. Recent cases in Germany of infringements of their rights in this repect were restrained under heavy penalities.

—The Casino Company which concluded an unsuccessful season at the Victoria on Tuesday last disbanded at Seattle under financial difficulties. —Many young men of this city and province, in days gone by, pupils at Vieuseaux and the Collegiate schools, with the late Charles Swanson, will regret his terrible and sudden death. He was very bright and quick at school and generally speaking had no peer in scholastic duties. He could count his schoolmates by the hundreds with whom he was very popular.

THAT ROMANTIC ELOPEMENT.

Portland News: An exchange contains a bundle of inaccuracies which it terms a romantic elopement and marriage. The parties are Mr. Gordon Kellogg, secretary to the American Consul at Victoria, and Miss Anna Van Volkenburgh, daughter of a wealthy stock owner of that place. The reason is best explained by Mrs. Kellogg, nee Miss Van Volkenburgh. In a letter to a Portland young lady, she says she had a tilt with her father, and went off and did the rash act. Mr. Kellogg is a respectable young man and receives a good salary. He has lived in Victoria about a year and a half, and came from New York. He has never been in his father-in-law's employ nor is he now working with pick and shovel for the railroad company, as the contemporary states.

A REGATTA.

The committee appointed some time ago are perfecting arrangements for the holding of a regatta in honor of the visit of the Rt. Honorable Sir John A. Macdonald. It will be held at an early day and those wishing to take part should govern themselves accordingly.

MRS. YOUMANS' LECTURE.

A very large audience assembled in Theatre Comique last night to hear Mrs. Youmans lecture on "Building the Wall." After the preliminary exercises, this talented Canadian lady stepped to the front and without apology or preface—an example to our local speakers—plunged into her subject. The building of the wall of Jerusalem by Nehemiah was used as an illustration of the efforts now being made by prohibition advocates to build the Scott Act up as a wall against the surging tide of intemperance. The construction of the wall around Jerusalem was minutely described, and a running commentary and comparison, full of striking illustrations, was kept up during the delivery of the eloquent lecture. A rapid, fluent talker, possessing a complete command of words, and thoroughly in earnest, it goes without saying the lecture was an excellent one. To our mind it was superior, both for what it contained and the manner it was given, to anything heard in the city for some years. At the close a number of ladies and gentlemen stepped forward and signed the pledge. Mr. Meston lead an excellent chöir, which sang doing the evening several hymns in a pleasing manner. Mrs. Youmans will lecture in Saanich to-morrow afternoon, and no doubt will again be heard in Victoria before taking her departure hence.

KILLED ON THE TRACK.

Charles Swanson, who has had charge of the Hudson Bay store at Hope, for the last four or five month, was found dead in the first tunnel above Hope station on Friday morning, where he had evidently been run over by the train going west at 8:30. His body was found by the section men, who were coming down on a handcar. His face was disfigured almost beyond recognition. The Indians with whom he crossed the river states that on arriving at Hope station he (Swanson) started to walk on the railway track towards Yale. The body was taken to Yale by order of the coroner, where the inquest will be held. Swanson was a steady, industrious young man and was greatly respected by his many friends here, who are overwhelmed with grief at his untimely death.

DEATH OF A COMPOSITOR.

News has just been received at this office of the death of a well known compositor, who worked in this city for close upon three years—Mr. Edward A. Poat. The sad event took place at his brother John's residence, Santa Rosa, California, and was caused by that dreadful malady, consumption. Deceased was well known to the printers of Winnipeg and throughout Ontario. He had hosts of friends among the craft, who esteemed and loved him for his warm heartedness, candor and honesty. His death they will all sincerely regret, and many a silent tear will be shed to his memory.

COMING TO VICTORIA.

The Queen of the Pacific, sailing yesterday from San Francisco, has the following passengers for Victoria: Miss R Horton, Miss Clark, J C Devlin, J W Lomas, A K Munroe, W H Calver and wife, F B Jenkins, J H Knarston, Jno A Robertson, Wm Keefer, Miss E N Case, J Chenowith, M Braverman, A H Glasscock, H Sellons, Miss F R Houston, T B Wheaton, W McIntyre, Miss Cox, Fannie F Fowler, H Delamontanya, F B Viers, Mrs C Haskin and child.

A CHEAP IMPROVEMENT.

Government street is being rapidly graded and gravelled in good shape under the direction of Mr. Hendry. The road will be one of the best in the city, and the improvements will be at a small cost. The material and work on this street cost about $1 per square yard; we know of streets in other cities that are not so good that have cost $3 and $4 per square yard. The difference is apparent at once and the city is getting something good for a mere song.

ELECTION OF GRAND OFFICERS A. F. & A. M.

The election of grand officers for the Grand Lodge of Canada resulted as follows: H Robertson, Collingwood, Grand Master; R T Walkham, Kingston, D G M; J E S Avignon, Windsor, G S W; W J Simpson, Brockville, G J W; Rev C L Worrell, Morrisburg, G Chaplain; E Mitchell, Hamilton, G Treasurer; D J Bennett, Parkdale, G Regr; J J Mason, Hamilton, G Secretary.

A SEATTLE AGENCY.

Mr. W. Van Waters, who for the past two years has held the position of wharfinger for the C. & P. S. R. R. Co., has resigned. Mr. Van Waters was tendered the position of general ticket and traffic agent in Seattle and for the Sound country, for the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, which he has accepted. The Canadian Pacific is reaching out with no uncertain hand for the trade of that section.

Among the many superior qualities of Messrs. Curtis's & Harvey's celebrated DIAMOND GRAIN powder might be mentioned its GREAT PROPELLING POWER, SAFETY IN USE, CLEANLINESS, REGULARITY OF EFFECT. These merits are appreciated not only by the sportsman in the field, but by victorious teams at international rifle matches at Wimbledon and Creedmoor, New York, who used Curtis's & Harvey's DIAMOND exclusively. ‖

SIR JOHN'S RECEPTION.

At the citizens meeting yesterday afternoon to make arrangements for the reception of Sir John A. Macdonald, Mayor Fell presiding, a motion was carried that the reception of Sir John be left in the hands of the Mayor and Council, and that the regatta committee be called together to-night to arrange for a regatta on the Arm.

TWO MONTHS.

The young man Proctor, whose face has been familiar in the prisoners' dock at the police court during the past year, has at length come to grief. He will spend the next two months at the government house on Topaz avenue for stealing a ring from Helen Martin, one of the free and easy. Upon the expiration of his enforced seclusion, he ought to emigrate.

CIVIL SERVICE

Among the list of candidates who passed successfully the civil service preliminary examinations of May last were Frederick Wm. Davey and Charles McNiffe, of this city, and among those who passed the qualifying examination at the same time were George Edward Dickinson and James Sterling Smith, also of Victoria.

SEATTLE'S ASSESSMENT.

The assessor for Seattle has completed his work. The total value of real estate is $3,769,4[illegible]; improvements on the same, $802,290; personal property $1,004,595. This is an increase over last year in real estate of $565,015, and a decrease in personality of $27,165.

MR. STUART CUMBERLAND IN VICTORIA.

Mr. Cumberland's seance to-night at the Philharmonic Hall is not only the only one he will give in this province, but in all probability it will be the last he will give in any country. Some years ago Mr. Cumberland devoted much time to the investigation of the subject of thought-reading and he raised the subject to the dignity of a science. He gave public illustrations of his powers in many countries and with universal success. He has absolutely retired from the routine of giving further public demonstrations, and it was only at the request of several influential gentlemen in this city that he postponed his departure east in order to give the public of Victoria an opportunity of witnessing his remarkable powers. Mr. Cumberland is a gentleman of some considerable fortune and he enjoys the acquaintance of the most illustrious personages, not only in England, but in all countries. His purpose in visiting this country is to write an exhaustive account of the new national highway from the Pacific to the Atlantic, and he has already sent a series of articles by to-day's mail to several of the leading Australian and Indian newspapers. It is his intention to embrace a political career and he will on his return to England seek an early opportunity of entering the House of Commons. Mr. Cumberland is the author of two highly successful books; one published in German, is a scientific work called "Besucher aus dem Jenseite" and the other is a romance called "The Rabbi's Spell." This latter book has had an extraordinary sale, upwards of 750,000 copies having been disposed of.

The seance to be given by Mr. Stuart Cumberland to-night will not take more than one hour and a half, finishing at 9:30. It will be replete with interest and the public will have the opportunity of seeing for the first and only time one of the most remarkable men of the time.

BROWN, THE MIND READER TO-MORROW NIGHT.

To-morrow (Sunday) evening, Mr. J. Randall Brown, the mind reader and spiritual medium, assisted by Lillie May Brown in her wonderful specialities will give their much talked of seance at the Victoria Theatre. Mr. Brown's programme is divided into two parts, the first being devoted to the mental phenomena and the second to a series of spiritual demonstrations said to be far more wonderful and convincing than anything ever before introduced on a brilliantly lighted stage. Tables will float about the stage; messages received from the dead; spirits appearing in full form; together with other startling manifestations of a unique and weird character. The prices are reasonable, 50 cts. and 25 cts. extra for reserved seats. The Seattle Post-Intelligencer gives a most flattering account of Mr. Brown's performance in that city on Sunday evening last, describing the several tests as more than satisfactory in every respect. The P.I. makes particular reference to the last test in which Robert E. Stevens was asked to write the name of a deceased friend on a slip of paper, and fold it up closely so that the writing could not be seen. Mr. Stevens wrote in a cramped back hand the name of Edward D. Baker, his deceased uncle, who was killed during the war at Ball's Bluff. The paper on which the name was written was folded four or five times, and handed to Mr. Brown, who placed it to his forehead in the same condition it was handed to him. He said, "I see the initials E. D. B. The person was suddenly killed in battle." He then described the late Colonel E. D. Baker, and taking a pencil hastily wrote a message, which he signed "Edward D. Baker."

GOOD TIME.

The Yosemite arrived from New Westminster to-day a few minutes after one o'clock. This is the earliest hour of arrival here this summer.

N. PORTMAN.

THE LYTTON MURDER.

Four men were arrested at Harrison and taken to Lytton, but they were liberated, as it was shown they were only passing down the road on the day of the murder. Three other men, one a French-Canadian and one a deserter from the Mounted Police, were arrested and locked up for examination. One of the men had spots of blood on his clothing.

The sportsman in purchasing his powder should be specially careful in seeing that he gets from his dealer the GENUINE PACKAGES of Messrs. Curtis's & Harvey. Very inferior powder is often sold at apparently cheap prices under the name of DIAMOND GRAIN, but Messrs. Curtis's & Harvey are the original manufacturers and proprietors of the justly celebrated DIAMOND GRAIN POWDER.
